

I consider it very unfair to allow telemarketers to use my private telephone for their purposes. I pay for this equipment for my own use, not theirs!

Most of these calls are at dinner time. I have also received phone calls from telemarketers as late as 10:00 pm. This should tell anyone that telemarketers can be very inconsiderate and rude. When I tell them I'm not interested, what I hear in return is the phone slamming down - I never get a chance to tell them not to call me again. That was the first attempt to stop telemarketers. Guess what- it didn't work! By slamming down the phone they can say they never heard it.

Also, there are a lot of very elderly retired people living on their own in NJ and have no one to help them. These telemarketers zero right in on these people and take advantage of them on a monetary basis. They need to be protected.

Remember that old expression "money talks". I wonder if it's still true. Thank you
